Who is my adviser?

Best Interest Advice authorises both individual and corporate advisers that you may engage. If you do not wish to receive our advice, we may act on your behalf in which case we will only be carrying out your instructions. If you do not obtain advice, you face the risk that the investments or financial product(s) you select may not meet your objectives, needs or suit your financial situation. Best Interest Advice Pty Ltd is responsible for the actions of its employees and representatives. However, Best Interest Advice Pty Ltd is not responsible for services provided to you by any other third party including other financial service providers.

As part of our delivery of services to you, we may prepare a Statement of Advice or a Record of Advice and possibly provide you with one or more Product Disclosure Statements prepared by one or more product issuers. Where we prepare a Statement of Advice or a record of advice we will always provide you with a copy (either electronic or paper version) and keep a copy in our files, or on our website. You are entitled to request a copy (at no cost) up to 7 years after the date of issue. As a provider of financial services, we may act on the instructions we receive from you in writing, by telephone, email or any other form of communication.

What information should I provide in order to receive personalised advice?

Our advisers will only provide advice after you agree to the terms of our financial services guide. You will then be required to complete an online personal fact find which will collect your personal information, goals and objectives, financial situation and needs. If you do not provide accurate information about your situation, the advice you receive may not be appropriate to your needs.

What is the difference between getting general advice and personal advice?

General advice is given only if your adviser clarifies with you (the client), when they give the advice, that they are not giving personal advice, because they do not consider the relevant circumstances (i.e. your objectives, financial situation or needs).

If you choose to receive a general advice report from our calculators and tools, it will be without taking into account your objectives, financial situation or needs (s949A (2) (a) of the Corporations Act). You should then consider whether this advice is appropriate to your needs.

The delivery of advice is also neutral when it comes to technology. This means that you can receive factual information and advice by telephone, email, internet, video conferencing, or face-to-face, or in any combination of these.

How are we paid for the advice services we provide?

We charge for our advice based on the time it takes to collect the data, consider the scope of the advice, consult experts and stress test strategies to make sure that they are appropriate and in your best interests.
